In Djibouti you can make it big . . . or die trying.

Dara Barr, an Oscar award-winning documentary filmmaker has covered Bosnian women, Neo-Nazis, and post-Katrina New Orleans. Now, she's looking for an even bigger challenge.

Accompanied by her right-hand-man, a six-foot-six, 72-year-old, African-American seafarer named Xavier, she heads to Djibouti, on the Horn of Africa, to tackle modern-day pirates. Once they start filming, though, they find a whole lot more than they bargained for, including:

- A pirate chief who keeps a Mercedes in Djibouti.
- A cultured Saudi diplomat with dubious connections.
- A billionaire American who plays different roles as the moods strike him.
- A black al Qaeda terrorist from Miami with very lofty ambitions, who wants to blow up something big.

Everyone wants the next big score.

What Dara and Xavier don't know is which guy is going to get the prize — and what they'll have to do if they want it.
